

Sea Otters By Sofia

Sea otters are amazing animals.
there are many secrets about them that people don't know. Today I am going to share these secrets with you.

The sea otter's body is an amazing thing. They have the thickest fur of any mammal. Their fur is so thick that they have to groom it every day. Imagine! Oh, wait! I forgot to tell you. Sea otters are marine mammals. They spend most of their lifetime in the water. They are 4 feet Part of that 4 feet is it's little sticky webbed feet. They weigh from 60-85 pounds. That's more than me!

Sea otters live on the coast of the Pacific Ocean, but as I said, they jump into the water a lot. But sometimes, they're not on land or water! Sea otters sometimes rest on icebergs.

To get food, sea otters have to dive into the water. When they do find fish, they float on their backs while they eat. They also use their bellies as dinner plates. They eat clams, mussels, and fish.

When sea otters have a baby, it's one at a time. The average life span for a sea otter is 20 years. Sea otters have to carry their babies on their chests. Sea otter babies are called pups.

Fun Facts:

- Sea otters use kelp as a blanket to keep from floating away.
- A sea otter group is called a herd.
